

MusicBox Studio Monthly Report

Month/ Year: October 2012 Studio Location: Nashville South

Studio Director: Jen Hodges

In-Studio Highlights

Cynthia is beginning to experiment with harmonies, comping, and intervals. We jammed on a song she wrote. I held down the main riff, and she tried different progressions over it. We discussed the relationship between keys and chord changes. I think her first song sounds like Sonic Youth; we will begin to record it soon.

Don now has a strong grasp of notation on the keyboard. He can build triads using scale degrees, and is learning some classical and video game music.

Most of my drum students have learned 12 bar blues, and we are moving on to learning time signatures.

My songwriting kids are writing an epic new ballad! Daniel has a powerful voice; track will be up soon. Preview can be found in the video below.

Outreach/ Outside Collaborations

We represented Notes for Notes during the Bonnie Raitt show at the Ryman on October 28th. We had a table in front of the doors as people entered to get to their seats, so we distributed flyers for them to read as they waited for the show to start and were available to answer questions they might have about the organization. Spoke with a Belmont song-writing major is interested in volunteering and I met a girl named Jenny that teaches at East Nash High at Red Door, and have been talking with teachers at Pearl Cohn trying to work our way in the infrastructure.

Cross-Country Collaborations

Nashville South and Nashville North Collab in the works

Other Cool Stuff Worth Mentioning

There is a Safe Auto jingle competition going on. DeAndre and Dominique are working on a submission. The winner gets 5k, however the submission is due November 7th! I'm interested to see if the chance at some cool cash motivates them to get it done that fast. Tons of music in the works right now. Hopefully be done by the end of the month 😊
